Dodd Data Given by Secretary

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 3 (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's former personal secretary was quoted by a newspaper today as saying she helped columnists Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson to get information about the Connecticut Democrat.

The New Haven Journal-Courier said the former secretary, Marjorie Carpenter, related that other Dodd staff members also helped the columnists obtain data from the Senator's private files, explaining:

"Each of us, in our own way, became disenchanted with him."

The Journal-Courier said Mrs. Carpenter told an interviewer she expected to testify at hearings of the Senate Ethics Committee.

The Committee, acting on Dodd's request, is investigating charges made against him in columns by Pearson and Anderson.

These included the accusation that Dodd performed favors for a lobbyist paid by the West German government. After the Committee began its work, the columnists added that the charge that Dodd made personal use of funds from dinners held to raise campaign funds.
